Which would you pick: the person you love or your own dreams?
What would you do if given a second chance at that decision?

Eight years ago Emma Shaw picked her career and family over the man she loved, Fredrick Wentworth. Since then she has built a career in publishing and spends her free time making sure her father and sisters are taken care of. Fredrick has spent the same years building his career as a screenwriter under increasing public scrutiny as a celebrity. When the editor of Fredrick's first book is injured, Emma is forced to travel with Fredrick on his book tour.

Tension builds for the two former lovers over the course of the tour. Emma and Fredrick must face their emotional baggage and their misunderstanding about how their break-up impacted the other. Will they be able to find their way back together for a second chance at love?

This story of second chances was inspired by Jane Austen's Persuasion. It was written in July 2014 as a Camp NaNoWriMo novel. Camp NaNoWriMo, an offshoot of National Novel Writing Month, is an event run in April and July each year. Participants set their own writing goals. Modern Persuasion is available on Amazon in paperback and Kindle format. Modern Persuasion is being published by Illuminated Myth Publishing. Illuminated Myth is a micro-publishing house specializing in serial works of fiction that mine the riches of myth and superstition to bring new stories to light.
